Metclad Launches New Website & Brochure

As Metclad move beyond their 25th year of trading a decision was made to update the company website and to create a new brochure showcasing their work achievements.

Marvin Village, Metclad's MD says – "The last five or six years have seen us complete a range of high profile schemes that we're very proud of so the time was right to update our website to show these projects in all their glory".

The first process was to engage the services of leading architectural photographer – J Collingridge, who set to task capturing Metclad's back catalogue of finished schemes. The end result is a stunning set of images that really show off Metclad skills as one of the UK's leading Cladding and roofing companies.

David Abrahams, Creative Consultant adds, "In many cases the buildings speak for themselves so taking the time and the effort to capture these was the first step. Using 'J' has given us something very unique. All I had to do then is build a website and brochure that allowed the pictures to tell the Metclad story".

The new site is fully responsive built to work on mobile and tablet devices and also features a detailed company timeline showing the many Metclad achievements.

The brochure follows the direction of the website showcasing visually Metclad's skills, the format has been considered to show the images to their full potential.

So please go and have a look at our new site, give us follow or like on Twitter and Facebook and let us know what you think.
